Message from the Director

Dear Reader,

Thank you for taking the time to review the Davis Stuart Annual Report. You will notice a few of the various program offerings highlighted in this addition. The agency enjoys collaborative relationships with other organizations such as the West Virginia Department of Education, Fruits of Labor, 4-H, Churches in the community, and many others. It occurred to me, as I reviewed the information in the following pages, that through the effort of many, we are able to reach young people in powerful ways that none of us could do alone. The needs of children and families in crisis are many and diverse, and our approaches to helping them need to be diverse, as well. That is why we have designed a program that exposes children and families to as many new experiences and possibilities as we can. There is a saying that I often remind myself and teenagers, "Your past does not represent your potential."

Imagine the possibilities that are before us if we don't limit ourselves.

Davis Stuart has committed to returning children to their families as quickly as it is practicable to do so. Our average length of stay in our residential treatment programs has shortened significantly over the last several years. It is a challenge to prepare children and families for successful reunification. But, it is our committed staff members are up to the challenge. However, to do so we need the help of a compassionate community, committed volunteers, and dedicated, competent staff members. That is the secret of success when taking on a task as large as the one we have been assigned. In reviewing the year, it becomes apparent that Davis Stuart is blessed with these vital components. I would like to thank each person who has instilled life and hope to the families that we serve, and to each organization that reaches out to help us. We appreciate you all.

You will read about the accomplishments of some very special youngsters in this addition. We are so very proud of them all. These adolescents are learning that life has many possibilities and that there is a community of individuals that want to help them reach the excellence that each of them are deserves. It gives us great joy to see the satisfaction that young person has when he or she graduates, wins a ribbon at the West Virginia State Fair, learns to prepare and present a gourmet meal, or learns how to convince a large horse to follow directions and complete a task. It gives us a deep satisfaction to know that we are all making this possible together. We will continue to provide these opportunities as long as we work together to demonstrate that:

"The past does not represent our potential." The best is yet to come.

A publication of DAVIS-STUART, INC., a Presbyterian home for children, inspired and supported by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Licensed and funded as a child-caring agency by the Department of Health and Human Resources, State of West Virginia, and serving children and their families without regard to race, color, creed, or national origin.

Community Based Group Homes

When working in child care, there are some success stories that write themselves. Kachina is a young lady that came to Davis Stuart two years ago. Everyone at Davis Stuart has fallen in love with her precocious nature, gentle spirit, and warm heart.

During her time at Davis Stuart she has immersed herself in almost everything the organization has to offer, "Davis Stuart has provided everything that I needed while I've been here, especially spiritual life and equine therapy. I've learned a lot from those programs.", says Kachina. She became involved with the Spiritual Life Program when she arrived because she was curious about God. She says that spiritual life helped her to realize her own relationship with God. The Spiritual Life Program provided opportunities for Kachina to learn to play guitar, sing in choir, and participate in the annual Christmas programs.

As soon as Kachina arrived at Davis Stuart, she immediately took to the horses, and they took to her, as well. Kachina has a special relationship with each horse at our main campus. She describes the Equine Assisted Therapy Program as relaxing and therapeutic. She says,

"If you're stressed out or sad, everything melts away when you're with the horses, it's like your troubles and worries don't exist." Through her participation in the equine assisted program, Kachina has competed in horse shows at The State Fair of West Virginia and Davis Stuart's First Annual Horse Show, receiving ribbons and accolades.

Kachina participates in Davis Stuart's talent show.

Arriving at Davis Stuart two years ago, Kachina barely tested into the 9th grade. She had never sat in a classroom with peers and received instruction. In just 20 months, she was caught up academically and ready to graduate on time! An accomplishment that fills her with pride, "I always had one-on-one attention and they (the teachers) were always there to push and take me as far as I could go." Through her exemplary accomplishments she was able to become involved with the Culinary Arts Program. Through her work with the program, she, along with four other students, were selected to work with Tammy Jordan, owner of Fruits of Labor, a local food service and educational organization. Kachina participated in the Youth Addiction Prevention Program through the business, Seeds of Hope. Kachina did such an outstanding job that Tammy asked her to come back and continue working in the program.

During Kachina's time with Fruits of Labor, she continues to balance all of her responsibilities, receiving her high school diploma, continuing guitar lessons, assisting with the equine assisted program, and working with her peers in our culinary program. She is working on obtaining her associates degree in the culinary arts field and has already taken two agricultural classes through New River Community and Technical College. Her next goal is to certify as a culinarian through the American Culinary Federation (ACF). On the days she works with Fruits of Labor, Kachina arrives at 7a.m. to begin baking and getting ready for the day. Tammy says that Kachina is learning the baking and pastry component of the culinary field, refining her skills making breads, pie crusts, desserts, and cookies. On their busy days,

Kachina and Tammy Jordan, Fruits of Labor.

Kachina prepares 77 dozen cookies! In the afternoon, Kachina shifts to the chef's side where she works on her knife skill-set by prepping and sautéing for the lunch crowd. Tammy's goal is to make sure that Kachina is cross trained between baking and culinary so that she is fully prepared to take the ACF exam. Tammy adds, "Kachina is a remarkable young lady, and she is highly motivated and driven. She is a light and joy. We're very blessed to get to work with her. She makes me happy."

Lindsey Fleming, B.A., L.S.W.-Assistant Group Home Director

In order for Kachina to excel, Davis Stuart has provided her with a vehicle, cell phone, and laptop. But, as Lindsey Fleming, Assistant Director of Group Homes, states, Kachina's success is her own. "Kachina doesn't play with the cards she was dealt. She chose to take things into her own hands. We were there to provide support, but she did it on her own.", says Lindsey. Lindsey adds, "She is respectful and appreciative of all staff, peers, and support. She understands the value of the programs offered to her and is appreciative of them. She never takes advantage of anything that is offered to her or the freedoms given."

Kachina, 18 has given Davis Stuart permission to use her story.*

Education at Davis Stuart

From, Dr. Lyn Guy, WVDE Davis Stuart Principal

In July of 2015, the Davis Stuart teaching staff attended a conference devoted to teaching strategies for students. While held in West Virginia, it was conducted by the Marzano Institute out of Colorado and required us to deeply examine our teaching practices. In the following days, we followed up with Dr. Tina Boogren of the Marzano Institute, in her recent correspondence she noted, "Your emphasis on building relationships and making connections with all students is apparent, important, and appreciated. The impact you have on your students is long-lasting whether you ever see that impact with your own eyes or not; you have to trust that you are."

with all students is apparent, important, and appreciated. The impact you have on your students is long-lasting whether you ever see that impact with your own eyes or not; you have to trust that you are."

This statement, from an outsider looking closely into our classrooms on a regular school day, means a lot to us, because deep down, it is our highest aspiration. We know that the relationship with our students is what allows us to reach them academically.

The 2015-16 school year seems like a whirlwind now that it is complete. Many highlights made memories for the teachers and the students. Those memories began in the classrooms as we continued our Career and Technical Educational Program in the culinary arts. Additionally, we added agricultural education to make use of Davis Stuart's vast landscape. In September, representatives from NASA came to our school to teach the students how to build and program a Vex Robot for a competition. Since Davis Stuart was the pilot program, a videographer was on hand all week to film the project.

"IKE The Robot"

In October, we participated in Taste of Our Towns (T.O.O.T.) in Lewisburg and earned the money to take students to the Frontier Museum in Staunton, VA, to learn about the different types of early civilizations that affected the American expansion. We also hosted the quarterly institutional principal's meeting on campus. Our students had a chance to show off their culinary skills as they catered the event. The students also shared their programming skills, as they demonstrated the antics of the robots they had constructed.

In February, three culinary students were part of a team competing at the Junior Cast-Iron Cook-off at the Marriott Hotel in Charleston. They came away with third place, beating out several large, long-standing culinary programs, and tied with Pocahontas County for Best Teamwork.

In the meantime, 12 students passed their TASC (high school equivalency) and seven of them earned high school diplomas from their home schools as a result of completing vocational programs at the same time.

At the end of May, most of the students on campus and many of the Davis Stuart staff, rocked to Justin Timberlake's "Can't Stop the Feeling" and filmed the annual spring video.

You can view the video on our web-page:
www.davis-stuart.org.

It was great fun for everyone involved and had more videographers working on it as teachers used new technology provided by West Virginia Department of Education (WVDE). In fact, Davis Stuart School got all new computers and technology over the summer.

As I look back, I see what I already knew, that our culinary program not only opens doors for students, it has helped the campus become a much sought after meeting location because the amenities (i.e. food) are so good. The great news is that the program will get a $200,000 shot in the arm as we break ground on a new state-of-the-art restaurant-quality kitchen for culinary students, courtesy of a grant from WVDE. Great foods and great experiences for our students will definitely lead the way for the new school year.

Davis Stuart Can't Stop the Feeling!

DAVIS STUART HORSE SHOW!

During the first part of May, Davis Stuart held our first annual Horse Show! For those not familiar with horse shows, folks come to show their ponies and horses to win prizes.

Davis Stuart provided twenty different classes for participants. Also, our culinary arts students served hot dogs, nachos, popcorn, and more at our food tent! The response we got from our first year was truly remarkable. With the unpredictable weather May provided, our day started out with beautiful, sunny skies, but after a couple of hours, the sky opened and torrential downpour erupted. Despite the rain, we still raised close to $2,000.00! We hope, next year, to double that amount!

We could not have pulled off this event without the help of our sponsors:

Gillespie's Flowers and Productions, Greenbrier Bowling and Recreation Center, Greenbrier Valley Range and Recreation, Kroger, Lit'l Rascals Daycare Center, Seneca Trail Animal Hospital, Old Spruce Realty, Susan's World of Pets, The Gettin' Place, The Lawn Medics, and Tractor Supply.

One of Davis Stuart's mini therapy horses, Creamy. Creamy lost her eye to cancer, but she doesn't let that get her down and our kids love her!

The Hope Fund

The Hope Fund, a spring campaign for Davis Stuart, is a program where participating stores sold a paper egg for $1 to customers, who may write their name, or a name of their choosing, on the egg. Customers had the option to choose from four different styles of eggs that were specially designed by the teens at Davis Stuart.

Eggs are displayed in the Fairlea Magic Mart.

All proceeds donated from this campaign directly serves teens and families across the state who rely on the services we provide.

Obviously, as a non-profit, one of the goals of this project is to bring in additional monies, but it's also to raise awareness about our organization in the community and surrounding areas.

The response during our first year with this project was amazing! The campaign was featured in several newspapers and local news stations, as well.

We look forward to seeing the project grow through the years, eventually seeing The Hope Fund in partnering stores all over the state.

Thank you to: Cakes and Cones, Lewisburg Shoney's, Fairlea Dairy Queen, Fairlea IGA, and Fairlea Magic Mart for believing in the work we do and partnering with us!

Davis Stuart Development Officer, Amanda Scott, discusses The Hope Fund with WVVA.

Fairlea Magic Mart Store Manager, Paul Clemons, describes the community's enthusiasm for the project.

Spiritual Life

The primary focus of the Spiritual Life Program is to provide encouraging and inspirational opportunities for worship and spiritual growth for our residents at Davis Stuart. Our weekly chapel services are biblically based, therapeutic groups offer occasions for our young people to both express, and explore an increasing faith in Christ while they are with us.

Thanks to local congregations being willing to partner with us, our residents are allowed, and encouraged, to become involved in churches in the Davis Stuart community. Local church involvement cultivates additional opportunities for spiritual and emotional growth in a supportive, encouraging environment.

2015 Christmas Program

This summer, twelve of our residents have chosen to publicly express faith in Christ through baptism. Although the focus of our Spiritual Life Program is not primarily evangelistic, we do support those who feel lead to commit to Christ while in our care, and provide opportunities for baptism in a manner that is consistent with their respective denomination.

Our residents at Davis Stuart participate in the Spiritual Life Program voluntarily. Therefore, we feel a responsibility to offer relevant teaching in an appealing atmosphere for our young people. At times, that consists of contemporary worship services with guest speakers and musicians. At other times, that may include concerts in our outdoor amphitheater, or movie nights in our chapel. It may involve evenings singing together with a short devotion around a bonfire, with S'mores and hot cocoa. Or, a more traditional Sunday service with our residents' family members before our day visit.

Baptisms are offered to interested residents.

Regardless of the style or setting, one thing remains consistent:

“In showing the Spirit of Christ, Davis Stuart is committed to helping children and their families find the spiritual, physical, and emotional wholeness for which they have been created.”

WEST VIRGINIA STRONG

Like everyone in West Virginia, Davis Stuart is grief stricken over the loss and devastation for our family, friends, and neighbors. The events of Thursday, June 23rd is something the mountain state will carry for a very long time. We hope that you and your family are safe and sound. We also pray for the families who have lost so much because of this tragedy. We received many calls from friends and supporters concerned about our safety and welfare. All of our staff and children are safe, although some staff lost all they had. Some staff continued to work in the cottages taking care of kids, knowing their home may be flooded.

In order to rebuild from this disaster, we must help each other. It is a lesson we work very hard to instill in our youngsters, the popular saying among Presbyterians, “We Serve Because We Can”, is appropriate in this time. Our young people would amaze you. They have asked to be part of the volunteer efforts in the Greenbrier Valley and surrounding areas. A group of our boys and staff volunteered with St. James Episcopal Church in Lewisburg. They helped collect and organize donations as well as cleaning damaged properties.

Davis Stuart needs your support now more than ever. In order to continue to heal, prosper, and teach important values and lessons to the teens in our care, we need your monetary contributions. Unlike other non-profits, who only designate a portion of your donation to their cause, 100% of your donation goes directly to positively impacting the life of a child. Our “Mountain Momma” has never seen devastation on quite a scale this large, but West Virginians are resilient and if we continue to work together, we WILL make it through this tragedy.

One of our young men takes a very short break from all of the cleanup efforts.

Therapy and Healing

Davis Stuart is committed to providing teens and families with the therapy and tools needed to have successful relationships and healthy lives. In our therapy department, there are many spokes of the wheel, all implemented to increase long-term effectiveness, ensuring teens and families will thrive years after they've come to us. Therapy at Davis Stuart begins with creating goals and objectives for each child's treatment plan. We work extensively with families in preparation for the child to arrive home. In instances where family reunification is not feasible, we work to provide residents with other permanency options. If a youth is quickly approaching adulthood, we assist with that transition, as well. Treatment includes individual therapy, group therapy, and family therapy. Davis Stuart also partners with Rainelle Medical Center to provide a group called, Healthy Relationships that addresses sexuality and other issues.

Communication is key in the therapeutic process. Whether that's communicating with families, other staff, or social workers, the Permanency Coordinators at Davis Stuart are the hub. While we are all advocates, the Permanency Coordinators have a deep understanding of the emotional, physical, and medical needs presented in each child. This includes collaboration with our nursing staff and psychiatrist. The Permanency Coordinators must also keep close contact with the educational staff, both on our main campus and at the public schools. To ensure all of our staff are equipped with the necessary tools to provide a nurturing and healing environment, Board Certified Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD) Clinician, Buddy Dunkley (featured in the Employee Spotlight) provides training for staff on family dynamics and psychiatric emergencies.

Equine therapy provides, healing, friendship, and fun for many residents.

*Stewart Anderson, M.A., L.P.C.
Clinical Director*

Everything from the beauty and tranquility of our campus, to clinical interventions, Davis Stuart is a therapeutic milieu that provides the utmost quality in care. Programs such as, employment preparation and recreation are included in a child's treatment objectives. Employment Preparation Program is therapeutic in that it provides teens with the skill set needed to become employable adults and gives them exposure and experience interacting with their peers, members of staff, and those in the community. Voluntary programs such as spiritual life and equine assisted therapy are also included in a resident's treatment plan, permitting they're interested in the program. Equine Assisted Therapy Program is incredibly beneficial, unfortunately, many don't understand its value. The program is a great equalizer and has a very calming effect and helps to establish reality for many residents. It gives teens the tools needed to overcome obstacles, problem solve situations, and teaches them to think of others. These skills aid residents in being successful once they are discharged to home. In fact, according to Clinical Director, Stewart Anderson, M.A., L.P.C., equine assisted therapy is the first recommendation for treatment of mood disorders. We encourage students to participate in all groups in order to give them exposure to new and exciting things. Davis Stuart is striving to maintain this very valuable service through private funding as it currently is not represented in Medicaid codes.

EMPLOYEE SPOTLIGHT

In order to provide the utmost quality care for our children, we must employ exceptional staff. In January 2016, Davis Stuart Therapist, Buddy Dunkley, became Board Certified as a Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD) Clinician through the American Psychotherapy Association.

In 2008, Buddy earned his bachelor degree in Psychology and Political Science, In 2011 he received his master's degree in Mental Health Counseling. Mr. Dunkley joined Davis Stuart as a therapist in 2013. In addition to his degrees, Buddy is a licensed Professional Counselor in West Virginia and North Carolina. Becoming a Board Certified PTSD Clinician marks his membership with the American Psychotherapy Association. He is also a member of the American Counseling Association, American Mental Health Counseling Association, and WV Counseling Association.

Buddy says, "Davis Stuart has different features other programs lack, such as equine therapy, employment preparation, and culinary arts. We work to get teens back to their families and communities, and not prolong their stay. If family reunification is not feasible, we work diligently to stabilize these individuals to enter to independence." Buddy enjoys working with troubled teenagers and the flexibility of using different styles of therapy. He also likes to know that he has helped to make a difference in their lives.

Glenn Kaiser

Kaiser prays with Mark Spangler and his band before the show.

This summer was a great time for happy memories to be made by staff and residents alike. We kicked off the summer by welcoming Glenn Kaiser for a concert at our amphitheater!

Kaiser is a Christian blues singer, songwriter, and pastor from Chicago. Kaiser spoke to the youth about his own personal experiences overcoming drugs and alcohol to find purpose and meaning through Christ. He also performed some of his own personal songs at Davis Stuart's amphitheater. Kaiser spoke on the importance of realizing the bigger picture and humanizing every person in need, "If you see a homeless man on the street, it's important to remember that is someone's son. Someone loves and misses that person. It's the same with these kids, they are someone's child and they are all special", said Kaiser.

Kaiser gives a powerful testimony

The evening was opened by Executive Director, Mark Spangler's band "The Spanglers" followed by performances from Glenn Kaiser.

Gesundheit!

quickly, everyone became fast friends.

We were delighted to welcome back some very unusual visitors to our main campus in Lewisburg. Thirty clowns from the Gesundheit! Institute in Hillsboro, WV came to Davis Stuart's main campus in Lewisburg to laugh, play, and inspire the staff and teens. Quickly, the clowns broke out into groups and submersed themselves in the classrooms and cottages. At first, the teens weren't quite sure what the unexpected visitors were up to, but

Members of the institute come together from countries like Mexico, Spain, Italy, The United Kingdom, and The United States to learn to heal through laughter and joy.

The Gesundheit! Institute is a nonprofit organization and the creation of Patch Adams. In 1998, Patch Adams became a household name from the portrayal done by the late actor, Robin Williams in the movie, "Patch Adams". Adams founded the Gesundheit! Institute in 1971 to create a new, holistic health care model that would integrate laughter, joy, and creativity.

Budgetary control and financial reporting assure all concerned that agency funds are being administered responsibly. An annual external audit is performed routinely. The Executive Director submits to the Board of Directors an approved, detailed, and balanced budget for the upcoming fiscal year-July 1, 2016 through June 30, 2017. These charts above represent a consolidation of that detailed information for the July 1, 2015-June 30, 2016 fiscal year. Throughout the year the Board receives quarterly reports which compare actual operating results to the budget. Adjustments are made according to the agency's needs.
